THE LIST of Jubilee Honours is rather a disappointment to the legal profession. There is a peerage bestowed on Lord Justice LOPEZ and a K.C.B. on Sir FRANCIS JEUNE in his capacity as Judge-Advocate General, and a knighthood on Judge SELFR, but the legal honours stop with the judges.
 While three baronetries are given to the medical profession, there is no recognition of the existence of two branches of practitioners of the law. Previous precedents pointed to a knighthood for the Treasurers of the Inns of Court and the President of the Incorporated Law Society, and we venture to think it is matter for regret that those precedents have not been followed on the present occasion.

IT WILL be seen from the notices of motion for the annual meeting of the Incorporated Law Society, which we print elsewhere, that there are four notices of motion relative to the Long Vacation—one to the effect that the principle of a Long Vacation should be maintained, its duration being restricted to eight weeks, two others for curtailing it for different periods and on different terms, and another (in case the meeting should be against any curtailment) that all chamber work should proceed during it without interruption except for a month.

THE LEADER of the House of Commons was unable last week to state when the Land Transfer Bill would be introduced in that House. He did not, however, assent to the opinion of a member on his own side of the House, who, when the question was asked when the Bill would be brought in, exclaimed "Never!" If the delay is due to a desire to subject the measure to full consideration before taking any further steps, we have nothing but commendation for the course taken. We imagine, however, that the Government are only now beginning to ascertain the strength of the feeling which exists against compulsory registration of title. A solicitor, whose letter was published in the Times of Thursday, gives an interesting instance of this feeling. He was acting for a local tradesman in the purchase of some agricultural land. As a possessory title only was shewn to a part of the land, the solicitor suggested that his client should register under the Land Transfer Act with a possessory title. When the client was told he would have no deeds, but only a certificate of registration, he absolutely refused to have his land registered. He said he had always been accustomed to have his "writings" relating to any property he bought, and he would have them still. The writer adds: "There is absolutely no wish among the public for registration; the great majority do not know what it means, and it is well known that, but for the anxiety of the Treasury to make an office pay which has always been carried on at a loss, and the wish of certain officials at the Land Registry Office, who, I suppose, are not paid by salary, for more work, the whole movement would die of inanition. If the public could understand and vote upon the point they would strongly support the total abolition of the Land Transfer Office rather than make registration compulsory. The change will greatly favour certain official lawyers and the peripatetic solicitor as against the old-fashioned legal adviser, who has sufficient work to make it necessary for him to stay regularly in his office in order to be at hand when his clients call."

SEVERAL CONVEYANCERS at Lincoln's-inn have signed and issued the following memorandum as to the omission of clause 13 of the Land Transfer Bill, 1897, as brought into the House of Lords, in consequence of which the Statutes of Limitation will not apply to registered land:—"We are of opinion that the Statutes of Limitation should apply to registered land, and that clause 13 should be restored for the following (amongst other) reasons: (1) The operation of the Statutes of Limitation, or the acquisition of title by prescription, is universally considered beneficial, and conduces to morality; their repeal would be a retrograde step. (2) Such an important change in the law as practically repealing the statutes should not be made a mere subsidiary part of a measure which is merely intended to improve the procedure of land transfer. If such a change is beneficial, it ought to apply to all land whether registered or unregistered. (3) No inconvenience will arise owing to the operation of the statutes on registered land. The purchaser will decline to complete when he finds that the vendor will not be able to put him into possession on completion owing to a stranger being in possession, whether the stranger has acquired title under the statutes, or is a mere trespasser. (4) Land vacated by the registered proprietor can never be sold if the statutes are excluded; this may be a public disadvantage. (5) Disputes as to boundaries of land are practically decided by possession or user for 12 years under the statutes. If the operation of the statutes is excluded, it may be necessary to give evidence of possession or user for 12 years preceding the first registration. (6) The statutes are necessary to protect (1) small adjustments of boundaries at present made by agreement without conveyances, and even without legal advice; (2) informal exchanges which often are allowed to rest on agreement; (3) many other small transactions where to save expense, or for other reasons, legal formalities are dispensed with. In all these cases the exclusion of the statutes will either frustrate the intentions of the parties or necessitate additional expense, hardships which will chiefly be felt in the case of small properties. (7) The protection of the statutes is required for mortgagees in possession who will otherwise remain indefinitely liable to account for the rents and profits on the footing of "wilful default," a liability which will devolve on their representatives. If the operation of the statutes is excluded, expensive foreclosure proceedings will be necessary in many cases where they are now avoided, and title will never be acquired by the mortgagee in some cases where, owing to the mortgagor having absconded, it is impossible to obtain foreclosure, or impossible to obtain it without ruinous expense."

THE DECISION of the Court of Appeal in Re Montagu's Settlement (ante, p. 490), affirming the decision of KEKEWICH, J. (45 W. R. 380), shows that in spite of the extended jurisdiction of the court under modern legislation there are still cases where it is unable to give directions for the beneficial management of settled property. House property at the West-end of London had been settled upon trusts under which infants were entitled in remainder. The property consisted of long leasehold premises which were old and out of date, and it was proposed to pull these down and expend about £8,500 in erecting new shop property. The lease under which the premises were held had been recently renewed for a term of eighty years, and it was estimated that the rebuilding would very largely increase the saleable value and the rental of the trust property. There were, however, no funds available for the improvement, and the only way to obtain the requisite money was by a mortgage of the property. Such a mortgage was not within the powers conferred upon the trustees by the settlement, nor was it within the statutory powers of the Settled Land Acts. If it could be created at all this could only be done under the authority of the court in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction, and upon a summons taken out for the purpose the question arose whether any such jurisdiction existed. Unfortunately the court has not, except in cases where the property was actually in peril of destruction, felt at liberty to sanction a mortgage on behalf of infants, or the expenditure in such a manner of settled funds. In Frith v. Cameron (19 W. R. 886, 12 Eq. 169) MALINS, V.C., authorized the raising of £5,000 to rebuild a residence where the original house had become ruinous; and in Conway v. Fenton (37 W. R. 156, 40 Ch. D. 512) KEKEWICH, J., allowed settled money to be laid out in the restoration of farm buildings which were so much out of repair as to make the farm untenable. But in both these cases the expenditure was designed, not for the improvement of the property, but in order to keep the property intact for the purpose of the settlement. In the present case of Re Montagu's Settlement it was solely a question of improvement; and in a careful judgment KEKEWICH, J., held that he could not extend to such a case the jurisdiction he had exercised in Conway v. Fenton. His conclusion upon the authorities was that, whatever the court might from time to time have done in cases of salvage, or whatever might have been done without full consideration of the question of jurisdiction, the court had never asserted a jurisdiction to spend settled money in pulling down and rebuilding houses. In this conclusion the Court of Appeal have with reluctance concurred. Admitting that the proposed rebuilding would increase the value of the settled property, and would be greatly for the benefit of the infants, yet to sanction this was beyond the power of the court. The result shows a defect in the law which should be speedily remedied. Somewhere, either in the trustees or in the court, there should be full power to deal with property in the way most beneficial to persons interested who are not en jure.

TWO LETTERS published in the Times of the 24th inst. give a useful insight into the actual working of the jurisdiction under the Debtors Act, 1869, to order imprisonment for debt. Theoretically imprisonment for debt is a thing of the past; practically it is still a matter of everyday occurrence. According to the last volume of Judicial Statistics the warrants of commitment in county courts in 1894 amounted to over 85,000, and the debtors imprisoned were 7,648. Inasmuch as section 5, sub-section (2), of the Act of 1869 requires that the jurisdiction to commit to prison shall only be exercised where it is proved that the debtor either has, or has had since the date of the judgment, the means to pay, and has refused or neglected to do so, the actual imprisonment seems to argue contumacy upon the part of the debtor for which he may not improperly be punished. But, however this may be, there are obvious objections to the custom, said to be prevalent, for debt collectors, whether individuals or companies, to buy up debts of which the creditors have despaired, and then to enforce them by threat of imprisonment. As the committal order works in practice, it is rather a means of making the body of the debtor a security for the debt in favour of an assignee who is willing to rely on such a security than the mere punishment of contumacy in paying a debt which the debtor has the means of paying. The fact that so few of the committal orders end in actual imprisonment makes it appear at first sight that the debtors have the money by them and are only waiting for the pressure which the prospect of imprisonment brings. But Mr. WALTER H. MORGAN, of Pontypridd, in one of the letters to which we have referred, points out that this is a fallacy. Ordinarily the order for imprisonment is not immediate, but is kept back for a time so as to give the debtor a further chance of making payment. Thus, says Mr. MORGAN, the plaintiff can select his time for enforcing the order, and those who are experienced in the art take care to do it just at or about the time when the debtor receives his wages, and, having the money in his possession when arrested, he naturally parts with it rather than face the degradation of entering a prison-cell. This means, however, that the creditor takes the money with which the debtor is about to pay the tradesmen who have supplied him with necessities while he has been earning the wages, and who look to these wages for payment. Thus the threat of imprisonment simply leads to the preference of one creditor over another, and does not really act as a punishment for contumacy.

FURTHER objections are taken to the practice of imprisonment for debt in a letter from Judge HARRINGTON. The large experience which his position has given him leads him to advocate very strongly the abolition of imprisonment as a remedy for the enforcement of judgments for civil obligations, subject to certain exceptions. The excepted cases are those where the credit is given (so to speak) involuntarily, where, for instance, it has been obtained by misrepresentation, or in actions for wages. But with respect to imprisonment for debt generally, Judge HARRINGTON objects that, in urban districts at least, it holds out a great temptation to improvidence, that it is worked at enormous expense, and that there is no uniformity in its working. Undoubtedly the system of collecting debts through the county courts, with the prospect of imprisonment as a last resource, is a great inducement to tradesmen to supply goods on credit, but it leads the debtor into a ruinous mode of payment. If he is sued in the county court and has an order made against him for payment by instalments, he is liable to a separate six weeks' imprisonment on each instalment, and the successive court fees which are incurred will prove a very substantial addition to the original debt. It is no exaggeration, observes Judge HARRINGTON, to say that in a very large proportion of cases in which payment by instalments is enforced by judgment summons the costs in court fees alone, exclusive of any allowance to the plaintiff, amount to from 25 to 50 per cent. on the amount recovered. And this heavy penalty does not in practice have a deterrent effect. "The class on which it falls never looks to the future, and its only practical effect is to burden the thrifless with a load which makes improvement hopeless, and which they too often attempt to get rid of by perjury and fraud." The want of uniformity is perhaps a necessary result of a system which vests a discretionary jurisdiction in a large body of judges acting quite independently of each other, but it forms an additional reason why the jurisdiction should not exist, at any rate on the present scale. Judge HARRINGTON, however, indicates a practical difficulty in the way of any change, which he regards as almost prohibitive. "To abolish, or even materially curtail, the existing powers of imprisonment for non-payment of judgment debts would so enormously reduce the number of plaintiffs entered in the county courts as to make a revolution in their financial arrangements imperative. The difficulties in the way of this, in view of the number and influence of the interests concerned, would be almost insuperable." But if the present system of imprisonment for debt is oppressive and demoralizing, of course no such consideration should be allowed to delay its reform.

WITH REGARD to the question of official searches, to which we referred last week, our attention has been drawn to the following observations on the subject contained in Elphinstone and Clark on Searches, p. 167: "The person against whom the search is made may have had more than one residence at the time when the entry [of judgments, &c.] was made against him, and he may be described in the entry as of one of those residences only, or he may have changed his residence since the date of the entry; or even if he has not done so, the name of his house may have been altered, or the name of the street in which he resides or has resided, or its numbering, may have been altered. From any one of these causes the person making the search may search against him by a description which is not that on the register. A careful person seeing an entry in the name of the person against whom he searches with a different addition or address, will take a note of the entry and make further inquiries. But the certificate of an official search will not mention such an entry. The practical conclusion is, that an official search is not quite as safe as a search made by a solicitor in person, and that no solicitor can ever feel certain, however carefully he may have made the necessary searches, that he has found everything entered up against the vendor—unless, indeed, he adopts the ruinously expensive plan of noting every entry made against persons bearing the same name as the vendor, whatever may be their descriptions, and of then satisfying himself that none of these entries apply to the vendor—a course which is clearly impracticable. We may add that, even if he were timid enough to follow this course, he would still not be absolutely safe; the vendor might have changed his name prior to his purchase-deed, a fact of which there would be no trace on the abstract, and something might have been entered up against him in his previous name."

IN CASES under the Settled Estates Act, 1877, in which married women are interested, it is necessary to consider whether the requirement of section 50 of the Act, under which separate examination is essential, has been affected by subsequent legislation which has given married women control of their property. In Riddell v. Errington (32 W. R. 680, 26 Ch. D. 220) it was held by PHARSON, J., that since the effect of sections 1 and 2 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, was to put a woman who had married since the Act in the position of a feme sole with regard to her property, the examination in such cases was not now necessary. In the case of a woman married before the Act, no such change has been effected with respect to property acquired before the Act, and in Re Harris's Settled Estates (33 W. R. 393, 28 Ch. D. 171) it was held, also by PHARSON, J., that under such circumstances the examination was still necessary. The remaining case—namely, of property acquired since the Act by a woman who was married before the Act—has now occurred in Re Batt's Settled Estates (ante, p. 508), before KEEKEWICH, J., and in accordance with the principle of the above cases it was held that no separate examination was now necessary.

DELAY IN THE PERFORMANCE OF BUILDING CONTRACTS.

THE recent decision of the Court of Appeal in Dodd v. Churton (45 W. R. 490) deals with an important point as to the effect of delay in the performance of a building contract. The ordinary condition for the payment of a penalty by the contractor in the event of the building operations not being finished by a fixed date is primarily applicable to the work originally specified in the contract, and if it is made to apply also to further works which are ordered in the course of the building, an undue burden may be thrown upon the contractor. With respect to work of which he knows the extent he can make his own calculations and fix the date for completion accordingly, but if the condition binds him also to completion within a given time of additional work ordered by the building owner, he is undertaking a liability the amount of which he cannot estimate.

It is natural, therefore, that the condition should primarily be held to apply only to the work included in the original specifications, and this principle has been affirmed by Dodd v. Churton (supra). It is, indeed, the principle applicable to all contracts, the performance of which is delayed by the conduct of one party. "The performance of a condition," it is said (Com. Dig. Condition (L. 6)), "shall be excused by the obstruction of the obligee, as if a condition be to build a house, and he, or another by his order, hinders his coming upon the land." This is an extreme case, but the ordering by the building owner of extras which the builder cannot refuse to execute, and which cannot be performed within the specified time, is equivalent to an obstruction by the building owner. He releases the builder, therefore, from liability to penalties, and he cannot impose a fresh liability by allowing extra time for the additional work and then claiming penalties from the expiration of the extended period.

The rule laid down in Comyns' Digest was recognized in Holme v. Guppy (3 M. & W. 387) where the plaintiffs had contracted to complete certain work within the space of four months and a-half from the date of the agreement, and there was a penalty of £40 a week for each week's delay. They were delayed four weeks in the first instance by the delay of the defendants, the building owners, in giving possession, then one week by the default of their own workmen, and another four weeks by the default of the defendants' workmen. Ultimately there was a delay in the completion of the work of five weeks after the date fixed. It was held that the default of the defendants had excused the plaintiffs from the performance of the original contract, and, since there was no evidence to shew that they had entered into a new contract for the performance of the work by a later period, the matter was at large, and the plaintiffs consequently were not liable to forfeit anything for the delay. The judgment of the Court of Exchequer delivered by Parke, B., is important as emphasizing the fact that the building owner cannot allow an extension in respect of the delay caused by his own conduct, and then claim penalties subsequently, although in the circumstances of the case it would seem that the ultimate delay of the contractors was really less than the delay which would have been attributable to the building owners.

That the building owner forfeits his right to exact penalties if the delay is due to his own default is, indeed, so clearly just that it is not surprising to find the principle frequently approved. Referring to the case just cited, BYLES, J., said in Russell v. da Bandeira (13 C. B. N. S. p. 205) that it was both consistent with the ancient authorities, and was founded on the most invincible reason and good sense. In the case in which this remark occurs there was a contract to complete a ship by a fixed date under a penalty of £5 a day. There having been delay, and a reference of matters in dispute to arbitration, it was found by the arbitrator that a considerable part of the delay was due to disputes and objections on the part of the shipowner which were untenable. Hence it was held that he could not enforce the penalties against the shipbuilder.

The above cases were decided upon the general principle that delay due to the conduct of one party to the contract excuses punctual performance on the part of the other, but they did not touch the special case of delay caused by the ordering of additional works. In Westwood v. Secretary of State for India (11 W. R. 261) there was a contract for the building of steamers to the satisfaction of the engineer to be completed within six months, with penalties for delay, and it was provided that the engineer might allow an extension of time, and might also, in writing, order additions or alterations. Additions and alterations were duly ordered, and the steamers were not completed in time. In an action for the price of the extras the employer pleaded a set-off of penalties for delay, and the contractor replied that the additions ordered made it impossible to complete the vessels in time. The court held, however, that it would be unjust and unreasonable to allow any such claim. The case was argued on demurrer, and upon the pleadings it had to be taken that the engineer had ordered additions and alterations which made it impossible for the work to be completed within the stipulated time.

A decision which at first sight seems at variance with the principle in question was given in Jones v. St. John's College, Oxford (19 W. R. 276, L. R. 6 Q. B. 115), but upon examination it will be found to depend upon the special terms of the contract. By these the builders agreed to complete certain work by a fixed date, but subject to extras or alterations which might be ordered as in the contract mentioned. In case of delay there was to be a penalty of £3 a day. In an action brought by the builder for the balance of his account the defendants pleaded that there had been delay in completion and claimed to deduct £873 by way of penalty. The plaintiff replied that the defendants had ordered additions and alterations which were so mixed up with the original works that it was impossible for him to complete them on the day named, and to this the defendants rejoined that the plaintiff had by the contract agreed to complete the works contracted for, with alterations and additions, as if these latter had been originally comprised in the works, and that the period of completion was not, unless specially authorized by the defendants' officer, to be exceeded. To the view expressed in the rejoinder the court acceded. "We have," said MELLOR, J., "the contract set out upon the record, and it appears there is express provision made by that contract for an extension of time in case the clerk of the works shall consider it necessary; but the contractor's contract positively and absolutely binds him to do the work and the alterations within the given time, unless an extension be made under that particular stipulation. . . . In the face of that stipulation we cannot imply a condition which is at variance with it." The court admitted that the plaintiff had bound himself to perform what might be impossible, but his real intention in entering into the contract was to rely on the fairness and judgment of the other party, and the court declined to release him from his contract.

It is evident, however, that Jones v. St. John's College applies only where the contract binds the builder to perform not only the original works but also any additional works within the time limited. In Dodd v. Churton (supra) there was no such contract, and the decision in Westwood v. Secretary of State for India (supra) was followed. By the contract the builder agreed to carry out certain works and to complete them by a fixed date under a penalty of £2 a week. The building owner was to be entitled to call upon the builder to do extra works, but any authority given by the architect for any alteration or addition was not to vitiate the contract. Extra works were ordered, and in consequence the whole work was not completed until twenty-seven weeks after the stipulated date. The defendant proposed to allow two weeks as being a reasonable time within which the extra works might have been completed, and in an action by the plaintiff, the builder, for the price of the extras he counter-claimed for £2 per week for twenty-five weeks. The Court of Appeal (Lord Esher, M.R., and LOPES and CHITTY, L.JJ.), however, held that there was no agreement by the builder to complete the original work with the extras within the stipulated time so as to compel them to follow the decision in Jones v. St. John's College (supra), and in the absence of a clear stipulation to this effect such an unreasonable burden was not to be imposed. The case, therefore, fell within the rule that the building owner, although entitled to give orders for extras, disables himself from obtaining penalties if, by the ordering of such extras, he has rendered it impossible for the builder to complete the work by the specified date. This is a result of ordering additional works which should be carefully considered in settling the clause imposing penalties for delay.

SIMMONS v. UNDERWOOD. Bruce, J. 20th June.

COMMENCEMENT OF TENANCY—NOTICE TO QUIT.

This was a trial under order 14 of an action of ejectment. On the 28th of April, 1891, under an agreement of tenancy of that date, the defendant entered into possession of a house and premises at Harleeden, belonging to Mr. David Cross. The agreement was for a term of three years. No date was stated as the day of commencement of the tenancy, but the rent was to commence from the half-quarter day, the 9th of May, 1891, and the first half-quarter's rent was to become payable on the 24th of June, 1891. The defendant held over after the expiration of the term, and remained in possession as tenant from year to year. The plaintiff was the assignee of Mr. David Cross. On the 29th of September, 1896, the plaintiff gave the defendant notice to quit expiring on the 25th of March, 1897. The question was whether the year commenced on the 25th of March or on the 24th of June, so as to entitle the tenant to notices expiring on those days respectively. Counsel for the plaintiff cited Doe d. Wadmore v. Selwyn (Adams on Ejectment, 4th Ed., 107), and contended that, where nothing was said as to date of commencement of the tenancy, the quarter-day before the entry into possession was to be taken as the date of commencement. Counsel for the defendant contended that the tenancy commenced either on the half-quarter day or on the quarter-day after the entry into possession. He cited Doe d. Holcomb v. Johnson (6 Esp. 10) and Wesley v. Walker (38 L. T. 284).

BRUCE, J., gave judgment for the defendant.—COUNSEL, Vesey Knox; F. Low.—Times.

LEGAL NEWS.

OBITUARY.

MR. JOHN WILLIAM LONGBOTTOM, solicitor, of Halifax and Hebden Bridge, died at his residence, Heath Bank, Halifax, on the 14th inst., at the age of sixty-five years. He was articled to the late Mr. John Cronhelm, of Halifax, and for many years practised alone at Halifax and Hebden Bridge, but since 1886 he carried on business in co-partnership with his two sons, L. H. and A. T. Longbottom, under the style of Longbottom & Sons. Mr. Longbottom, until three years ago, when his health gave way, held numerous public appointments. Amongst others he was clerk to the Halifax Guardians; superintendent registrar of Births, Deaths, and Marriages; clerk to the Gratiand, Stainland, Soyland, Midgley, and Barkisland Local Boards, and Stainland School Board. He was also for many years one of the aldermen of the Halifax Corporation and a member of the Halifax School Board. By his death a familiar figure in Halifax and district and a respected citizen has been removed. Mr. Longbottom's two sons have succeeded to their father's public appointments.

The death is announced of Mr. WILLIAM MARTIN WILKINSON, solicitor, at the age of eighty-four years. Mr. Wilkinson was admitted in 1837, and formerly practised in Lincoln's-inn-fields, and subsequently, as Wilkinson & Son, in Bloomsbury-square. He retired a few years ago. He will, says the Times, perhaps be better known to many by his services to the Charity Organization Society. Among many who in the decade 1860 to 1870 were working towards the better organization of charity or made definite proposals with that object, he may be considered the society's actual founder or inventor. In 1869 a prospectus and rough plan of organization, compiled by Mr. Wilkinson, was adopted at a meeting of the Anti-Pauperism Association, at which the late Lord Lichfield and the late Sir Orfeur Cavenagh were present. It was distinctive in several of its features, and was in outline the scheme of the present Charity Organization Society, and in April of that year the name of the association was, on Mr. Wilkinson's motion, altered to that of the Society for Organizing Charitable Relief and Repressing Mendicancy. Mr. Wilkinson did good service in calling public attention to a mass of legislation, of which formerly but little notice was taken, for providing for the care of the blind, deaf, and other afflicted persons, and he was one of the first to urge the view, now definitely accepted by the law in regard to blind and deaf children, that under the Education Act of 1870 afflicted children, if they can be educated, are as much entitled to education as are others.

APPOINTMENTS.

The Right Honourable Lord Justice LORNE has had a Peerage conferred upon him.

The Right Honourable Sir FRANCIS JENNE, Judge-Advocate-General, has been made a K.C.B.

His Honour Judge SELWY has been made a Knight.

CHANGES IN PARTNERSHIPS.

DISSOLUTIONS.

GEORGE DOUGLAS FOWLE and STEWART DELAMAIN AINGER (Fowle & Ainger), solicitors, 180, High-road, Chiswick, W., and 1A, High-street, Kensington, London, W. June 17. [Gazette, June 22.]

GENERAL.

Mr. T. M. Goodeve, the well-known patent lawyer, was entertained at a complimentary dinner at the Savoy Hotel on the 19th inst. on his retirement from practice at the Bar. The Attorney-General presided.

Such stimulating terms as "fool," "idiot," "know-nothing," "brute," and "vile wretch," which were addressed by a wife to her husband, and her declaration that "he hadn't sense enough to know when he was insulted," were, says Case and Comment, the basis of an unsuccessful claim for divorce in a Massachusetts case. The court said that though the husband was affected injuriously in his health to some extent, the wife was moved in part "by what seemed to her good motives and by a desire for his success in life."

The question whether the naming of the baby belongs, as a matter of right, to the baby's father or to the baby's mother is, says the Albany Law Journal, raised in a law-suit originating in Eastkill, in the heart of the Catskill mountains. The plaintiff is Old Halverson, a Swede, who cultivates a small farm on the mountain side. He has sued for damages the Rev. J. G. Remerton, a German Lutheran minister of the same place, and the pleadings set forth the following state of facts: Mr. and Mrs. Halverson have a son of tender years. The former desired that the boy should be called Oscar, after the present monarch of Mr. Halverson's fatherland. Mrs. Halverson dislikes the name of Oscar, and was determined that the baby should not be burdened therewith. Mr. and Mrs. Halverson took the baby to the clergyman to be christened. Mr. Halverson requested the minister to name the child Oscar, but Mrs. Halverson had already talked the reverend gentleman over, and to Mr. Halverson's surprise and indignation, the boy was christened not Oscar, but something else, whereby Mr. Halverson suffered serious disappointment, loss of authority in his household, laceration of feelings, &c., for which he prays damages. The clergyman's defence is that he christened the child in accordance with the wishes of its mother, whose rights in the premises he considered paramount. The case brings up a novel question in jurisprudence, the decision of which will be regarded with interest in thousands of families throughout the land.

Sir F. Jeune sends to the Times a note on the Silver Oar of the Admiralty by Mr. Wilfred Cripps, in which he says that "no part of the oar is older than 1818, except the silver arms of England, with supporters, and the outer rim of the crown by which they are surmounted. By possibility, the blade of the oar on which the above crown is fixed is old, too, but this is very uncertain and incapable of proof. The whole of the staff with its bosses were made new in 1818 by a firm of silver-smiths working in London at that date. Their mark was entered at Goldsmiths' Hall in 1790

W.P.
I.P.

the initials standing for William Pitts and John Preedy.

They no doubt replaced all they could of the old silver plate of arms and supporters, and engraved the present crown in the bottom space left by the breaking away of the more central parts of the old crown. The repairers in 1818 also replaced the old name of Jasper Swift on the flat plate forming the butt end of the mace. The arms were almost certainly placed temp. Henry VII., and the name of the then Marshal added temp. Elizabeth. The plate on the butt end, unlike the silver plate of arms, is not the old one, but an entirely new one, like all the rest of the handle or staff, and made in 1818. The name of the Marshal was then engraved afresh on the new plate. The arms of the Duke of Clarence, afterwards King William IV., and the anchor beneath them are, of course, of the present century. There is no ground for interpreting some of the goldsmith's marks on the handle as of great age, as suggested by Dr. Travers Twiss."

THE WRITER OF THIS LETTER

is Mr. L. Cassell, 15, King George Street, Greenwich, London, S.E. He says:

"I have been for years a martyr to a very bad form of headache, which attacked me nearly every day, sometimes quite prostrating me. I was advised to give up drinking tea entirely, and take Cocoa as a beverage. I decided to try Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, which I commenced taking some two months ago, and I am glad to say that since then I have been quite free from my dread enemy, headache. I feel confident that this result was brought by Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, for I had tried numerous remedies without any success. I find nothing picks me up so quickly as a cup of Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa after I have had a stiff day's work in a shop. I shall be glad to testify personally to anyone what a real boon your excellent food beverage has proved to me."

DR. TIBBLES' Vi-Cocoa

is made up in 6d. packets, and 3d. and 1s. 6d. tins. It can be obtained from all chemists, grocers, and stores, or from Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, Limited, 40, 41, & 42, Dumbell Row, London, E.C.

The unique vitalising and restorative powers of Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa are being recognised to an extent hitherto unknown in the history of any preparation. Merit, and merit alone, is what is claimed for Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, and the proprietors are prepared to send to any reader who names this paper (a postcard will do) a dainty sample tin of Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa free and post paid.

WANTED, by Solicitor (age 26) having command of £1,500, Clerkship, with view to Partnership, in general practice, town or country.—R. G. A., Watlington & Sons, Limited, London-wall, E.C.

ABSTRACTING, Copying, Examining Title Deeds, and Somerset House Work (and High Court and County Court work up to trial under supervision) undertaken by advertiser; used to London offices; salary £120.—Address LAROS, "Solicitors' Journal" Office, 27, Chancery-lane, W.C.
